14 HOUSING BENEFITS RISK-BASED VERIFICATION

Ian Roper, Commercial Finance Team Leader, presented the report which updates the Committee on the risk-based verification of a new housing benefit claims.

The risk-based verification policy for the financial year 2016/17 is attached to the report.

The following points were highlighted:

- (a) the former approach to verifying housing benefit claims evidence was costly and time-consuming. During the past five years a risk-based verification pilot scheme has been running where the claims are placed within categories of high and low and medium risks with regard to potential fraud and error;
- (b) a range of indicators using complex algorithms have been used to identify risk levels and for high risk applications the applicant will be asked to provide specific documentary evidence prior to the claim consideration;
- (c) it is now possible for citizens to apply for housing benefit online using the Venture System which, on the information provided, grades the application risk and provides an almost instant appropriate response to each applicant, including accepting the claim without asking for proof or specifying what type of documentary evidence is required;
- (d) this new system saves time and money, improves efficiency and has led to improved customer housing benefits applications satisfaction as claims are turned round much quicker;
- (e) implication of the scheme cost £25,000 and costs £5,000 per year maintenance. This equates to approximately 43p per housing benefit claim handled;
- (f) 20% applications are considered high risk with a 5% sampling of medium and low risk applications taking place were these claims are treated as high risk by requesting documentary evidence, to ensure that the system is working appropriately;
- (g) following the success of the pilot, the scheme has now been implemented.

Members' questions were responded to as follows;

- (h) following new legislation, the City Council is working with Nottingham City Homes towards enabling the 'pay to stay' scheme which will be introduced next April, although progress is slow and the scheme is generally aimed at citizens with medium to high paid jobs;
- (i) the application of and initial outlay for this system this is part of the service improvement contract between Nottingham City Council and Northgate, with key milestones set to identify and ensure the required delivery;
- (j) there is no particular impact resulting from universal credit which is considered as another DWP benefit. The City Council is able to access DWP system to check which benefits are being received by claimants. As universal credit can be linked to earnings, this results in a lot of changes to benefit payments which then also are reflected in housing benefit payments.

Members welcomed the risk-based verification system.

RESOLVED to note the adoption of a risk-based approach to the verification of new claims for housing benefit.
