COUNCILLOR DAVID MELLEN
LEADER OF THE COUNCIL

Nottingham Labour Manifesto 2019

Introduction

Since we wrote our last manifesto back in 2015, so much has happened in Nottingham, in local government and across the country. We have had 4 more years of Conservative government. This means cuts to funding for services that we all rely on; including the Police, NHS, schools and benefits. We face uncertain economic times, with Brexit and ordinary people struggling to meet increasing living costs. And local authorities like Nottingham are struggling in the face of a national funding crisis, as the Conservatives continue to pass on huge funding cuts motivated by their desire to end local influence and decision making. Nottingham City Council has lost more than £100 million in government Revenue Support Grant since 2013, on top of significant increases in demand for our services, particularly adults' and children's social care. In total, we have had to save more than £268 million since 2013. These difficult times have led to challenges in delivering on our ambitious commitments for the city. But we never use this as an excuse and that's why over the last 4 years we've been able to deliver in full on 178 out of the 202 commitments we made in our last manifesto.

Because in spite of these difficult times, Nottingham Labour remains ambitious for Nottingham and for all who live and work here. We believe that funding cuts do not mean we cannot afford to be ambitious. They mean we cannot afford not to be. Nottingham needs politicians who want to make our city an even better place and who will rise to the challenges facing us, setting an ambitious vision for our city and finding innovative new ways of delivering it.

Nottingham Labour has that vision and we have a plan to deliver it. We are the only party locally that not only sets out its plans at each election, but also reports on our progress and is accountable for what we have achieved and anything we have not (www.nottinghamlabour.org.uk/manifesto-progress). The commitments in this manifesto will form the basis of our plans for Nottingham over the next 4 years if we are elected to lead the council and set the direction for our city for years after that.

Nottingham Labour's Vision for Nottingham

Nottingham Labour's manifesto is guided by our ambition for the city and our clear values. We want to help build a safer, cleaner city, that is ambitious for its residents and that we can all be proud of.

That means...

- A safer city
- A cleaner city that we all take pride in
- A diverse, vibrant and multicultural city
- A city where there is lots to do for people of all ages
- A health city where people look after themselves and make healthy choices
- A city that takes care of its residents
- A place where there is dignity in getting older and care for those who need it
- A city where there are opportunities for everyone and we're encouraged to prosper and be ambitious
- A city where people from all walks of life get on well and respect each other
- A city where everyone is able to reach their full potential

If elected to run the Council, Nottingham Labour will work the pledges in this manifesto into an action plan to help achieve our vision for Nottingham.

Our top 5 pledges if Nottingham Labour wins the Council election in May will be:

1. Build or buy 1000 Council or social homes for rent

Nottingham People

Nottingham is a vibrant, exciting city we can all be proud of. It's a place where our communities are strong and diverse and stand together to celebrate successes and to take care of each other. Nottingham is also one of the country's youngest cities, making it a lively and dynamic place to be. Nottingham Labour is proud to be a part of this great city and will continue to support our reputation as a place where people can get along with each other, especially in difficult times.

We know that when times get tough, people need a helping hand and that's where an effective council makes the difference. With a Labour council, we can help those who need support and provide the right environment to assist local people to get the best out of living and working in Nottingham.

Some Nottingham people are vulnerable and need extra help. While providing the support that those in need deserve is a growing challenge for us all, it is one that Nottingham Labour is determined to meet. In the last year alone, Nottingham City Council supported over 7,300 older and disabled adults, as well as over 1,500 carers, spending more than £100 million in total.

Despite repeated promises, the Conservative government has consistently failed to address the crisis in social care funding, affecting not only our budget but the already overstretched NHS. We are fighting hard for a better deal from government, whilst also working to meet the needs of individual people in our city.

Nottingham Labour is committed to promoting dignity and independence for those who need care and support. One of the ways we plan to do this is by setting up a Council owned and managed care company to deliver these services, where carers and those needing care are treated with dignity and respect. We will also spend much of our public health budget on things like parks, leisure facilities and promoting physical activity as a way of helping to maintain people's health and independence for longer.

We're proud of our children and young people. We want to help create an environment where they are safeguarded from neglect and abuse and can grow up to reach their full potential. As our population of young people continues to grow, we want to make sure there is lots for children, young people and their families to do. For those young people and families who are in need of a high level of support, our services are delivered by hard-working professionals who are committed to working with families, where possible with a therapeutic approach that avoids more costly interventions and keeps families together.

Since the last election, there's been a significant increase in the number of children attending Good or Outstanding schools. We want to continue working with schools to make sure all Nottingham children get the best possible education, and that schools meet the needs of the most able students, but are also equipped and ready to work with children with additional needs.

Nottingham is a great place and it's the people who make it. Nottingham Labour is committed to investing in Nottingham people and encouraging everyone in Nottingham to be ambitious for themselves.

At the last election we promised and have delivered:

- Almost 90% of Nottingham children attending schools judged good or outstanding by OFSTED- up from 69% in 2015
- Provided a range of activities for children and young people across the city, including more than 560 stay and play sessions in communities across Nottingham
- Delivered over 150,000 free books to more than 5000 children as part of the Dolly Parton Imagination Library
- Connected 115,000 people to activities, services and support in their local area through AskLION
- Created 62 new special school places for children with additional needs and funded support to help children with special educational needs get on in mainstream schools
- A Multi-Agency Safeguarding Hub that brings professionals together to ensure a joined up approach to keeping children safe
- Supported initiatives focussed on bringing people together, including the 'Looking After Each Other', 'Take a Seat' and 'Age Friendly Nottingham' campaigns
- Alongside the voluntary sector, secured £45million to invest in early intervention in St Ann's, Arboretum, Bulwell and Aspley through the 'Small Steps, Big Changes' programme
- Worked in partnership to retain all 18 Children's Centres across the city
- Created a graduate scheme to recognise and keep talent in the city
- Increased the number of Nottingham foster parents by 30%

Living in Nottingham

There are many things about Nottingham that make it a great place to live, work, learn and have fun. We have the best public transport in the UK outside of London, many affordable and good quality homes and a wealth of green and beautiful parks and open spaces enjoyed by thousands of Nottingham residents. Over the next 4 years, Nottingham Labour wants to help make our city an ever better place to live.

We've got some ambitious projects underway to help us achieve that. For example, we've secured funding and started work on transforming Nottingham Castle into a heritage attraction of national importance; and we're about to get to work on a new Central Library which, when complete, will be the best children's library in the UK. Our ambitious plans for the castle, library and south side of the city centre will put Nottingham on the map as a destination for retail, leisure and our rebellious history. All this provides first class facilities for Nottingham people and boosts our economy through visitors and tourists coming to our city.

We know the cost of living can be tough for many local people so we have tried to be innovative with our ideas, setting up the country's first not-for-profit energy company, Robin Hood Energy, taking on the big 6 energy companies and helping drive down average energy prices in the East Midlands. Robin Hood Energy now serves more than 135,000 customers and offers a green tariff as well as discounts for Nottingham residents.

And while the Conservative government presides over a housing crisis, in the last four years Nottingham Labour has also delivered 2500 affordable homes, including new council homes in St Ann's, Bulwell, Aspley and many more. Nottingham Labour understands the need to invest in our communities and we've delivered a new library at Strelley Court as well as a joint service centre in Sneinton.

In the next 4 years, we'll build or buy 1000 new council or social homes, as well as using the powers we have to drive up standards in the private rented sector. We also want to work with communities to deliver new community libraries in neighbourhoods like Clifton and Sherwood. And we will invest in 100 more parks, making sure there are places to play and be outdoors in every neighbourhood. We're also continuing to invest in roads, cycling infrastructure and public transport and we want to make it easier to use Nottingham's network of buses and trams, rolling out contactless payments and looking to build partnerships with Derby.

Nottingham Labour believes we have a responsibility to safeguard our city for future generations. That's why we've included a green section in our manifesto, reflecting our commitment to reduce waste and pollution and encourage recycling and responsible behaviours. We're proud of Nottingham and we want to keep making our city an even better, more exciting place to live.

At the last election we promised and have delivered:

- Built 2293 homes built that Nottingham people can afford to rent or buy, with more underway to meet our target
- The first municipally owned not-for-profit energy company, Robin Hood Energy, providing low cost energy to 135,000 customers

Growing Nottingham

Nottingham Labour wants to develop a thriving local economy where local businesses grow and prosper, money is spent in the local economy and there are jobs and careers available for local people.

We have a strong track record of working to grow Nottingham. Nottingham is now the fastest growing city for business start-ups and we've seen more inward investment than any other city in the East Midlands.

A number of major regeneration projects have both started and completed in the last four years and it's an exciting time for the city. The eyesore that was the Broadmarsh car park has now been demolished and work is underway to build a new car park, bus station and Central Library on the site, transforming the south of the city centre. Work is underway alongside Intu to redevelop the Broadmarsh shopping centre to create a new retail and leisure experience and increase footfall along routes towards the south of the city centre. New grade A office space is being built, and we've expanded outer city employment sites such as Glaisdale Industrial Estate, making way for business growth and creating employment opportunities in our neighbourhoods. Over the past 4 years, the Nottingham Jobs Fund has supported 8000 people into work and we have been able to guarantee a job, training or further education place for every 18-24 year old who wants one.

Unemployment is at its lowest level and the number of people claiming out of work benefits is down. As we work to grow Nottingham, we want to make sure that there are jobs and opportunities available for those who want them.

Nottingham Labour recognises the huge contribution that small and medium sized businesses make to our economy. There are over 10,000 SMEs in the city, employing 70% of people working in the private sector. We are committed to working with SMEs to create an environment where they can grow and prosper.

We want to create an attractive and vibrant city that has all the services people need, recognising the changing uses of the city centre and embracing the opportunities this presents. We'll promote a thriving economy where businesses invest and prosper and our city and neighbourhoods are at their best. And this will ensure that Nottingham people benefit from more jobs and increased prosperity.

At the last election we promised and have delivered:

- Supported 8000 people into work through the Nottingham Jobs Fund

Respect for Nottingham

Nottingham Labour remains committed to reducing crime and anti-social behaviour and encouraging different communities to live together and get on well. At the last election, we pledged to cut crime and the number of victims of crime by a fifth. Although both our Community Protection Officers and the Police have worked hard, we haven't been able to achieve this target.

This is in part due to a change in the way crimes are recorded, but also because of significant cuts in police budgets passed on by the Conservatives. Nottinghamshire Police have lost £54m in funding since 2010 and there are now 500 fewer officers on Nottingham's streets. In addition, at the last election we included a pledge to ensure that the city continues to be served by a single police division. Unfortunately, despite strong evidence to support this model, the then Chief Constable decided to scrap the city division. Crime increased as a result. But now under the leadership of a new Chief Constable that change has effectively been reversed and we've seen a renewed commitment to driving down crime and to increasing the numbers of police on our streets.

Nottingham Labour wants to work with the Police to achieve our mutual vision of a safer Nottingham and believe now we are far better placed than 4 years ago to do just that. Over the last 4 years, anti-social behaviour has been cut by 18%. Community Protection Officers have made an important contribution to achieving this, so we're repeating our commitment to maintain 100 CPOs to work across all areas of the city, as well as to reducing anti-social behaviour by a further quarter. We also want to make it easier for residents to report anti-social behaviour where they live and make sure we're able to respond quickly and efficiently. One of the great things about Nottingham is our diversity.

Nottingham is one of the most diverse cities in the UK and this is a huge part of what makes us a unique and strong community. Our latest citizens survey showed that 90% of people believe that different communities get on well together in Nottingham. Over the next 4 years we want to increase this further, with more people enjoying the benefits of living in Nottingham. We also want to make it easier for local people who know and are invested in their communities to contribute to making our neighbourhoods better places to live.

At the last election we promised and have delivered:

- 100 Community Protection Officers working across all wards of the city
- Reduced anti-social behaviour by 18%
- The number of repeat victims of domestic violence down by more than a third
- Increased reporting of hate crime by 86%
- Lobbied the police to maintain and then reintroduce city-focussed policing

- Given advice to landlords of more than 7000 private rented homes on improving the security of their homes and taken enforcement action against those who didn't follow that advice

10. Implement the city centre PSPO to create a safer, cleaner and more enjoyable environment to visit

Serving Nottingham Better

Nottingham Labour want to make sure that local people can access the best possible services from Nottingham City Council and from their councillors. Nottingham Labour councillors are the only local representatives with a track record of being on the side of local people and standing up to protect services and spending for Nottingham.

By contrast, Conservatives nationally have led 8 years of ideologically driven funding cuts to councils, which are putting local services at risk and failing to recognise changing demographics or show ambition for cities like Nottingham. Since 2013/14, Nottingham has lost more than £100 million in government Revenue Support Grant funding. Local Conservatives have repeatedly failed to stand up against these cuts.

But as this manifesto demonstrates, Nottingham Labour is still ambitious for our city. We don't see these cuts as an excuse not to serve Nottingham even better. Instead, we want to use our resources wisely to make sure Nottingham people are able to access the services they want and need quickly and efficiently. Over the past 4 years, Nottingham Labour has driven the council to use its existing resources commercially. In fact, a recent peer review of Nottingham recognised the council as ambitious, with an impressive track record of enterprise. Thinking commercially provides us with opportunities to generate income which we are able to invest back into providing public services.

Over the past 4 years, Nottingham City Council has generated £20 million of income through commercial activity. Although this doesn't meet the gap created by government cuts and changing demographics, it goes some way to mitigate it.

Over the coming years, we'll use new technology to make sure you can report problems easily and that they are resolved the first time you contact us. We want to make our contact centres a one-stop shop for a range of services that local people want and ensure that when you need it, advice on issues such as benefits and debt is available in your community.

Nottingham Labour recognises that the City Council has a role to play in leading by example on equalities. That's why we're including an equalities section in this manifesto for the first time. Over the next 4 years, we want to see Nottingham's diversity reflected more across the council's workforce, as well as in positions of leadership both within the council and across the city.

Over the next 4 years, Labour councillors will continue to campaign for fairer funding for local government, as well as for a Labour government that believes in investing in our communities for the good of the many, not the few. In the meantime we will do the very best we can for Nottingham with the resources we have available to us.

Labour's Pledge to you

Labour councillors and candidates care passionately about Nottingham. We're standing for election because we want to be a part of making the communities we live in better places. We live in Nottingham and use local services. We come from the local community and want to make sure the Council delivers the best for people just like you.

Nottingham Labour believes that wherever you live in the city, your Labour councillor should provide you with an excellent level of service. You should be represented by someone who will listen to you, be an advocate for you and champion your local area. Nottingham Labour is the only party that can make this pledge. That's why we will make every effort to be available to local residents, at surgeries, on the phone and via email.

Nottingham Labour councillors want local voices to lead local decision making. Councillors do this as part of their role as active members of their communities, hearing things directly from local people and from their own experiences of living in the city. Labour councillors work hard to be advocates for local people.

Residents contact us about issues ranging from nuisance parking to homelessness, and from potholes to housing repairs.
