No I think within commuting distance 4 schools is plenty, giving an option of 6 will allow the furthest to be chosen when this might not be viable but 6 options have to be selected

No There isn't even 4 secondary schools that my child can attend without a very lengthy commute. It is just going to make that worse. It will also lead to more homeschooling. Appalling.

No I don't see the purpose of it - 4 schools should surely be enough. Through conversations with parents and being one myself, if my child is not getting a place in my first choice or second, then I would not be happy and would consider appealing. A fourth choice seems unnecessary and a fifth and sixth, very much so.

Provide free bus pass for all secondary schools

Can make Grammar schools available in Nottingham. Nottinghamshire has one of the lowest A Level results. The children are badly behaved in school, and this takes away from academic kids who can achieve good grades.

Child should get a priority place in reception for the school they went to nursery at

Appreciate to have higher chance if all kids within one family can be in the same school for easy management

r 6 is always in the best interests of the child. It could also make exam preparation a lot trickier.

I wish the children could choose the school which is closer to them house. Some children have 3 schools around them within half of the mile and some not. My daughter couldn't go to the closest school to our house because it were other children which live closer and now she has to travel over 3miles with two buses to school , this is just nonsense. Nobody cares that she is autistic child , the most important is system and post code rules

Having spoken with the admissions teams in the city and county and as a head of an OAA school, I see the complications. As a headteacher of a city school, we feel that we often get children imposed upon us through appeals or fair access where there are other schools available.

As a parent, I could be closer to a school than another family yet not in catchment. I know lots of families find this very frustrating and confusing.
